- D. appellate courts to hear new cases.

18. Calvin, a resident of South Park, Colorado, creates a website called "But Seriously" which acts as an electronic billboard for posting funny stories. Ted, a resident of Northridge, California, posts a story on the website. Stu, another California resident from San Diego, files a lawsuit against Calvin in a federal district court in California, claiming that Calvin had defamed him on his website. Based on these facts, does Calvin have sufficient "minimum contacts" to give the California federal district court in personam jurisdiction over him?
- A. No, Ted's posting alone is not enough to create sufficient "minimum contacts."
 - B. Yes, Ted's posting creates sufficient "minimum contacts."
 - C. Yes, by creating a website that is accessible in California, Calvin has sufficient minimum contacts with that state.
 - D. Calvin has sufficient "minimum contacts" with California only if Stu's claim is in excess of $75,000.
19. Bubble Wrap Co. (BWC), an Atlanta corporation, has its principal place of business in New York. John, a resident of Florida, asserted on his website that BWC is engaged in ongoing criminal activity, scams, and phishing. BWC sued John in the U.S. District Court for the District of New York, alleging defamation and injury to BWC's business in New York. John filed a motion to dismiss the case alleging that neither subject-matter nor in personam jurisdiction existed. The court granted the defendant's motion and dismissed the case because:
- A. BWC could not meet its burden of establishing sufficient minimum contacts.
 - B. BWC did not have subject-matter jurisdiction.
 - C. BWC neither had subject-matter jurisdiction nor in personam jurisdiction.
 - D. publishing of those statements did not amount to defamation and thus no injury was caused to BWC's business.

Essay Questions

56. What two kinds of jurisdiction are necessary for a state court to have jurisdiction over a case? Describe each briefly.

57. Greg sues Ned in an effort to get title to some land claimed by Ned and located inside the state of Texas. Ned has never been to Texas in his life, has never had any contacts of any kind with the state, and refuses to appear in Texas to defend against Greg's suit. Later, after Greg wins a default judgment against Ned, Ned shows up in Texas to claim that the judgment was invalid because he was totally outside Texas, hence Texas courts had no jurisdiction over him, and for this reason they could not affect his rights to the land. Is Ned right? Why or why not? Assume that subject-matter jurisdiction exists.

58. Dee sues Gerry for defamation. Dee thinks that the facts clearly are not as stated in Gerry's complaint and that, given Dee's version of the facts, Gerry cannot recover for defamation. What motion gives Gerry the best chance of winning the case early? What does it involve?

59. What are the consequences of document alteration or destruction that interferes with legitimate discovery requests?

60. Does the Federal Arbitration Act (FAA) override a state law vesting initial decision making authority to a court or administrative agency?

Chapter 02 The Resolution of Private Disputes Answer Key

True / False Questions

1. Minor criminal cases and civil disputes are decided in the appellate courts.

FALSE

Minor criminal cases and civil disputes involving small amounts of money or specialized matters frequently are decided in courts of limited jurisdiction. Appellate courts correct legal errors made by trial judges.

When the parties have a contractual relationship, minimum contacts may be shown by the parties' negotiations preceding their agreement, the course of dealing between the parties, the terms of the agreement, and foreseeable future consequences arising out of the agreement. Federal circuit courts have rejected that merely posting defamatory or invasive material to the World Wide Web is enough to create minimum contacts and personal jurisdiction.

John filed a motion to dismiss the case alleging that neither subject-matter nor in personam jurisdiction existed. The court granted the defendant's motion and dismissed the case because:

- A. BWC could not meet its burden of establishing sufficient minimum contacts.
- B. BWC did not have subject-matter jurisdiction.
- C. BWC neither had subject-matter jurisdiction nor in personam jurisdiction.
- D. publishing of those statements did not amount to defamation and thus no injury was caused to BWC's business.

When the parties have a contractual relationship, minimum contacts may be shown by the parties' negotiations preceding their agreement, the course of dealing between the parties, the terms of the agreement, and foreseeable future consequences arising out of the agreement. In this case, there is no such agreement and hence, it does not apply. - A. in rem jurisdiction.
- B. in personam jurisdiction.
- C. quasi in rem jurisdiction.
- D. venue.

Quasi in rem jurisdiction is based on the presence of property within the state. Cases based on quasi in rem jurisdiction do not necessarily determine rights in the property itself. Instead, the property is regarded as an extension of the out-of-state defendant—an extension that sometimes enables the court to decide claims unrelated to the property.

24. Bob is a merchant in New York and Betty is a merchant in California. Bob wants to do business with Betty but he is concerned that if a lawsuit should result from their transaction, he might have to travel to California and hire a California litigation lawyer to litigate the dispute. What type of clause should Bob try to include in his contract with Betty that will probably assure him that if litigation ensues, it will take place in New York?
- A. Confession of judgment clause
 - B. Forum selection clause
 - C. Choice of law clause
 - D. Substantive clause

A forum selection clause may address both State Courts and Their Jurisdiction issues. Hence, it would be a useful tool for Bob in case any type of litigation takes place in the future.

39. Paul sues Dan for "aesthetic pollution." The basis for his suit is Dan's habit of wearing clothes Paul considers ugly. Paul's complaint offers details of Dan's "ugly" clothing in many separate, numbered paragraphs. However, no law requires one to pay damages for wearing clothes that another considers ugly and for causing aesthetic dissatisfaction to some other party. Thus, Dan wants to defeat Paul's claim as fast as possible. The best procedural device for doing so is the:

- A. motion to dismiss.
- B. motion for summary judgment.
- C. motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict.
- D. motion for a directed verdict.

Sometimes it is evident from the complaint or the pleadings that the plaintiff does not have a valid claim. In such a situation, it would be wasteful for the litigation to proceed further. The procedural device for ending the case at this early stage is commonly called the motion to dismiss. The most important type of motion to dismiss is the motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, sometimes called the demurrer. It asserts that the plaintiff cannot recover even if all of his/her allegations are true because no rule of law entitles him/her to win on those facts.

- B. will be considered unenforceable by all courts.
- C. will result in employees having to mediate their employment-related claims against Dillon's.
- D. will require an employee to mediate employment-related disputes.

Arbitration is the submission of a dispute to the arbitrator who issues a binding decision resolving the dispute. Arbitration usually results from the parties' agreement. That agreement normally is made before the dispute arises (most often through an arbitration clause in a contract). The Federal Arbitration Act requires judicial enforcement of a wide range of agreements to arbitrate claims. This means that if a contract contains a clause requiring arbitration of certain claims but one of the parties attempts to litigate such a claim in court, the court is very likely to dismiss the case and compel arbitration of the dispute.

56. What two kinds of jurisdiction are necessary for a state court to have jurisdiction over a case? Describe each briefly.

A state must have subject-matter jurisdiction and either in personam or in rem jurisdiction. Subject-matter jurisdiction concerns the court's competence to handle the type of case in question (criminal, tax, etc.). In personam jurisdiction is based on the residence, location, or activities of the defendant himself/herself, and how they relate to the state. In rem jurisdiction is based on the presence of property within the state.

Ned has never been to Texas in his life, has never had any contacts of any kind with the state, and refuses to appear in Texas to defend against Greg's suit. Later, after Greg wins a default judgment against Ned, Ned shows up in Texas to claim that the judgment was invalid because he was totally outside Texas, hence Texas courts had no jurisdiction over him, and for this reason they could not affect his rights to the land. Is Ned right? Why or why not? Assume that subject-matter jurisdiction exists.

Ned is wrong. Although the utter absence of contacts with Texas would prevent Texas from having in personam jurisdiction over Ned, Texas courts still would have in rem jurisdiction over him. In rem jurisdiction is based on the presence of property within a state, and Ned's land was located inside Texas.

The motion for summary judgment is a device for disposing of relatively clear cases without a trial. Under that motion, Dee and Gerry will present factual "evidence" such as pleadings, depositions, and affidavits to demonstrate their versions of the facts, and also will make legal arguments. If there is no genuine issue of material fact, and if (given those facts) the law directs that one party wins, that party gets a judgment.

As Arthur Andersen discovered in 2002, the potential legal consequences of document alteration or destruction that interferes with legitimate discovery requests include criminal prosecution for obstruction of justice. Additionally, courts have broad discretionary authority to impose appropriate sanctions for such conduct. These sanctions may include court orders prohibiting the party from raising certain claims or defenses in the civil action, jury instructions regarding the wrongful destruction of documents, and court orders for the party to pay certain attorney's fees to the opposing party. Of course, the long-term effect on the reputation of the party who destroys or alters documents in this manner can be severely adverse to the party's interests.
