- 17. If a firm wants to develop a sustainable competitive advantage, it should:
- (p. 35) A. begin an aggressive campaign to buy up competitors.
  - B. copy the innovative features of other firms that are attractive to customers.
  - C. examine its operations and customer relations to identify significant things competitors cannot easily copy.
  - D. increase its marketing budget so that it outspends its competitors.
  - E. arrange to meet with competitors to discuss how to avoid direct competition.

A sustainable competitive advantage comes from doing things that add value and that are not easily imitated by competitors. The other options do not achieve this objective.

But bankers know that consumers are creatures of habit and hope that the young people they serve now will become adult customers. These banks recognize:
  - A. that operational excellence is an important macro strategy.
  - B. the lifetime value of customers.
  - C. that product excellence leads to loyal customers.
  - D. the importance of making decisions based on short-term results.
  - E. that as long as customers bring in some revenue, costs do not matter.

By spending money now in the hope of receiving revenues later, banks are recognizing that the lifetime value of a customer relationship must be considered when choosing target markets. This does not mean that costs don't matter at all, but it means that a relationship that is initially unprofitable may become profitable as it continues.

A. no single strategy is likely to be sufficient to build a sustainable competitive advantage.

- B. situation analysis is a continuous process.
- C. customers rarely remain loyal to companies.
- D. product excellence is the only true source of a sustainable competitive advantage.
- E. innovation is pointless because competitors will develop copycat offerings.

The example shows that competitors strive to copy good ideas. But that doesn't mean innovation is pointless--being the first to do something can still give you an advantage if you do it best, or if you innovate in ways that are difficult to imitate. What this example shows is that you cannot come up with a single idea, stay with it long term, and expect to sustain a competitive advantage. You must always look for new sources of advantage.

  - B. a customer retention program.
  - C. an opportunity, in SWOT analysis.
  - D. customer loyalty.
  - E. the benefits of a locational excellence strategy.

By refusing to consider competitive offerings and staying in a long-term relationship with the salon, Anita is demonstrating loyalty to her stylist and salon. - 86. Customer retention programs are based on what concept?
- (p. 36) A. Customer excellence is the easiest macro strategy to follow.
  - B. Customer relationships should be viewed from a lifetime value perspective.
  - C. It is important to maximize profits in the first few months of a customer relationship.
  - D. Segmentation, targeting, and positioning analysis should not be rushed.
  - E. Firms must spend large amounts of money to retain customers.

Taking a lifetime value view of customer relationships demonstrates that profits through the entire relationship matter more than short-term profitability. While it is true that STP should not be rushed, this is not the focus of customer retention programs. Maximizing profits at the expense of relationships is almost the opposite of customer retention programs, since it focuses on quick profits at the possible expense of larger profits in the long run. The other two incorrect choices may be true in a few instances but they are often not true, customer excellence can be extremely difficult to achieve, and customer retention does not necessarily demand high levels of spending.

- 87. Most banks implement customer retention programs aimed at their best customers. They do this because they know that retaining customers usually results in:
  - A. a product development growth strategy.
  - B. an operational advantage.
  - C. opportunities for diversification.
  - D. increased long term profits.
  - E. more clearly defined market segments.

Customer retention programs recognize that it is often worth spending something in the short term to keep a customer in the long term. This approach looks at the value of the customer relationship on a lifetime basis instead of considering only the current transaction.

When selling yourself, you are a product including all the skills, aptitudes, and attitudes you bring to the market. What is a sustainable competitive advantage? What can you do to give yourself a sustainable competitive advantage in the marketplace?

A sustainable competitive advantage is something you can persistently do better than the competition. Skills including statistical analysis, ability to use technology, communication, and accounting etc, are all important and valuable. Aptitudes including rational thinking and problem solving are lifelong abilities that can benefit any organization. Attitudes such as persistence, a sense of humor, teamwork, are valuable in any business environment. This will include internal examination of the current status of the university including questions concerning, what are the university's strengths and weaknesses? Questions about external forces, threats and opportunities will also be asked during the SWOT analysis.

The text describes firms like Netflix and Southwest, who operate in competitive markets but successfully differentiate themselves from the competition. This gives them a sustainable competitive advantage. What is a sustainable competitive advantage? Describe an example of a product or business you have encountered that has developed sustainable competitive advantage. Why is that product or firm advantage sustainable?

A sustainable competitive advantage is something you can persistently do better than the competition. Student's examples will vary but should include product, operational, locational, or customer excellence that competitors have not been able to duplicate.

127. Your marketing professor, Dr. Marketing, has been asked to participate in the university's strategic (p. 44-47) marketing planning process. After completing the planning phase of the process, Dr. Marketing has been asked to assist with the STP analysis. What questions will Dr. Marketing ask during the STP analysis? Be specific to the university's strategic marketing planning process.

STP analysis includes segmentation, targeting, and positioning. Dr. Marketing will ask what basis for segmentation should be used. Should the university's market be divided based on age, income, geographic area, or maybe educational interests? After segmentation, the next question is which segments can be pursued profitably, or targeted?

Many market segments will likely be identified but Dr. Marketing will often have to ask, "Can we effectively and efficiently reach that group of potential consumers?" (For example, one university considered providing educational services to a local prison but ran into a host of problems making it impossible to target that market.)

Lastly, Dr. Marketing will ask questions about how the university intends to position itself in the various market segments. What products or services are going to be promoted? How are the university's products and services different from what competitors are offering? Where and how can the university build on existing strengths?

As the text states, "Firms typically are most successful when they focus on those opportunities that build on their strengths relative to those of their competition." Using the automobile industry in the United States, describe an example of this type of positioning strategy.

Answers will vary and change over time but likely choices include Toyota's Scion products, lower-priced cars targeting younger consumers or their Lexus division of upscale cars introduced years ago. In both case, Toyota built on its reputation for quality products (though that reputation has been somewhat tarnished lately). Another possibility is the recent re-positioning of GM's Hummer using ads with women drivers. The hybrid autos are a third possibility.

129. Your marketing professor, Dr. Marketing, has been asked to participate in the university's strategic marketing planning process. After completing the first three steps of the process, Dr. Marketing has been asked to assist with implementing the marketing mix and allocating resources. What questions will Dr. Marketing ask? Be specific to the university's strategic marketing planning process.

Dr. Marketing will ask marketing mix and resource allocation questions. Dr. Marketing will ask general product questions such as, "which courses and degree programs will create the most value for our consumers?" What prices should we charge for in-state and out-of-state students? What prices should we charge for graduate versus undergraduate programs? Should we charge higher or lower prices for online programs? Place or value delivery questions might include whether to emphasize day or night programs, classroom or online programs? Should the university open satellite campuses? Lastly, Dr. Marketing will ask questions regarding where and how to promote the university's programs? One of the critical but potentially controversial questions will be how to allocate the university's resources. Virtually every program on campus will want more resources and think their program creates the most value for students. Dr. Marketing will have to be careful when recommending additional resources for the marketing program!

130. Jamie, a sales manager for an industrial materials company, reviews each sales representative's performance quarterly. She knows business has been good but is surprised to see some reps are selling much more than their goals while others have not been meeting their goals. What should Jamie do?

Jamie should start by looking closely at the data. Were the successful sales people selling one or two items at discounts in order to generate volume or did they sell the full line of the company's materials to each customer, resulting in increased sales? Did the poorly performing sales reps sell to fewer customers, make too many small sales, or fail to sell the full line of materials? After reviewing the data, Jamie will probably talk with each sales rep and ask about that person's results, both those exceeding goals and those not meeting goals. Jamie will seek to explain the variation and utilize the information to make changes.

Boston Consulting Group's Portfolio Analysis classifies a company's products or product lines into a (p. 52-53) two-by-two matrix. What are the bases of classification and what are the products or product lines in each of the four quadrants called? What marketing strategies are usually considered for each of the four classifications?

The two bases of classification are relative market share (high-low) and market growth rate (highlow). This leads to four quadrants labeled stars, cash cows, dogs, and question marks.

- * Stars: high market share/high growth rate. Usually require continued promotion efforts and expansion of production capacity.
- * Cash cows: high market share/low growth rate. Sources of funding for other parts of the firm. They typically require modest promotional and production support.
- * Dogs: low market share/low growth rate. Candidates to be phased out unless they are needed to complement or boost sales of other products.
- * Question marks: low market share/high growth rate. Candidates for strategic marketing planning, assessing potential for growth.

Your new sales manager, who previously worked for Boston Consulting Group, directs each sales rep 133. to "toss out the dogs," "exploit the stars," and "milk the cows." Translate this into everyday English: what is the sales manager asking the sales reps to do?

Your sales manager wants you to stop selling those products that are in slow growth markets and which the company has a small relative market share. The manager also wants you to spend more time and effort selling products that are in high growth markets and which the company has a high market share. Finally, you should continue to sell but not put additional effort into high relative market share, low market growth products, referred to as cash cows.

After finishing his marketing degree, Ryan inherited the family shrimp shack restaurant. The restaurant is a small, local institution that beach visitors have been coming to for decades. Ryan wants to make his business grow and is considering either a market penetration or market development strategy. Describe what Ryan will likely do if he pursues either strategy.

If Ryan pursues a market penetration strategy, he will likely expand advertising and promotion, maybe adding billboards, promoting specials, adding hours and likely expanding the restaurant to serve more customers.

If Ryan pursues a market development strategy, he will attempt to serve new market segments. Since his product is a restaurant, market development would likely include opening additional locations in other areas, offering the same menu.

Garden Gate is a one-location nursery business, selling plants and flowers for home gardeners. The new owners want to grow through either a product development or diversification strategy. What will the owners likely do if they pursue either strategy?

If they pursue a product development strategy, they will offer new products or services to the firm's current target market. A nursery could logically provide a landscape design consulting service, landscape maintenance service, soil and pest testing service or add additional products such as indigenous plants.

If they pursue a diversification strategy, they would market new products or services to a market segment they are not currently serving. Targeting landscape design or maintenance services for commercial customers would be one type of diversification.

145. Several years ago, the Florida Orange Juice Growers Association ran a promotional campaign with the slogan: "Orange juice. It isn't just for breakfast anymore." Based on this slogan, which of the four growth strategies was the association pursuing? Briefly explain your reasoning.

The best answer is that this is a market penetration strategy. The slogan seeks to increase sales of a current product (orange juice), which reduces the options to market penetration or market development. "It isn't just for breakfast anymore" sounds like the Growers Association wants those who drink orange juice at breakfast time to consider it at other times of the day too. In other words, it focuses on increasing usage among current customers, which is market penetration.

Some students might say that it is a market development strategy. For this to be correct, they would have to argue that a different market segment that currently doesn't drink orange juice is being targeted.

Your answers should be specific to the inline skating business.

There are many correct answers; here is a sample. To make this question easier, you could ask the student to provide an idea for just one or two of the macro strategies.

- * Product excellence: Focus on continually improving the products and making them the most advanced ones on the market, perhaps using stylish yet durable fabrics that won't be damaged in a fall. Then work to develop a clear positioning statement for your brand.
- * Customer excellence: Offer outstanding service, perhaps including live chat on the website as well as no-hassle returns if the customer changes his or her mind about a purchase.
- * Operational excellence: Develop close relationships with suppliers of fabric and other raw materials and with retailers.
- * Locational excellence: In addition to having a top-notch website, try to get your products into as many retail stores as possible, probably focusing on sporting goods stores.

Conduct a brief SWOT analysis of your prospects of finding a good job related to your major when 147. you graduate (if you already have such a job, think about finding a job with more responsibility). Be sure to include at least one factor representing each of the four major sections of a SWOT analysis, and be sure to label each factor to indicate which of those four sections it belongs in.

In order to make sure the students clearly classify the factors, you might want to provide an answer space with four sections; in each one, include a blank line for the name of the section and additional space for the factor.

Students will come up with a variety of answers depending on their individual situations. They will probably need to do some speculation for Opportunities and Threats. Here is a sample:

- * Strengths students might mention internship experience, past work experience, classes taken, personal characteristics, or personal contacts
- * Weaknesses possibilities include lack of experience, inability to relocate, or a low GPA
- * Opportunities could include expected growth in the field, a new firm starting up in the area that will be hiring, or a shortage of graduates in the field
- * Threats could include the recession, a glut of graduates in the field, or reduced demand for professionals in the field

148. In July, 2010, Microsoft discontinued the Kin, its social networking phone, after just six weeks of disappointing sales. During what step of the strategic marketing planning process would Microsoft have made the decision to stop offering the product?

Step 5--Evaluate performance using marketing metrics.

Some students might also answer "Control phase." Strictly speaking, this is a phase and not a step; however, Step 5 is the only step of the process that fits into the Control phase, so you may want to accept both as correct answers.

If you want to make this question more difficult, you can add to the question the following: "What should Microsoft have done before deciding to discontinue the product?" The answer: Microsoft should have determined the causes for the disappointing sales in order to determine whether or not another action (perhaps a different target market, a price adjustment, or a revised promotion plan) could put sales back on track.

You plan to design a line of fashionable clothing that integrates elbow and knee pads. In launching your business, you complete all the activities listed below (though not necessarily in this order). For each listed activity, identify the step in the strategic marketing planning process it represents. a. Evaluate results; b. Situation analysis; c. STP; d. Business mission; e. Implementation
  - a. You track sales and profits, and discover that pants are selling better than shirts, apparently because the shirts are too expensive. You will look for a lower-cost supplier for shirts, or consider dropping your prices if you can afford to do so.
  - b. You realize that your experience as skaters is a plus; however, your lack of experience in selling clothing could hurt you. You find out that a skateboard shop in town wants to branch out into inline skating; however, you also find out that Nike is thinking about expanding its product line to include special inline skating clothes.
  - c. You decide that you will target college students who enjoy inline skating, and will aim to establish yourself as a company that offers trendy clothes for the student budget. d. You decide that your business focus will be to offer fashionable yet durable clothing for inline skaters, with built-in protection for knees and elbows.
  - e. You offer clothing that college students would want to wear, price it for a student budget, sell it online and in sports stores near college campuses, and promote your products on Facebook.
